YO TAMBIEN GETTING WELL.

Nomad's Reversal of Form Causes Some Quiet Thinking.

The alim attendance at Gravesend during the past week has furnished much food for gossip. The writer has asked horsemen, big bettors, track managers and others for a solution of the problem, and one and all they answer, "pootrooms." It is said that there is not less than three hundred rooms in the city at present, and that each has a clientale of at least two hundred to the track it is difficult to estimate. The problem is puzzling to many, but there is an easy solution and one which would effectually clear away all the clouds. It would be difficult, however, to and a racing association with the requisite backbone necessary to a trial of the remedy. The writer means nothing more or less than the abolition of book betting and the establishment of Paris mutuels in sufficient nume bers to accommodate the largest of crowds. This system of betting has worked with great her success in France, and why shouldn't it be a go in this country? To do away with book betting would purify racing to a considerable degree. There is no denying the fact that the books meddle too much with the racing, the jockeys, owners and associations. The latter are practically the slaves of the ring. The slightest wish of the bookes is respected by the Association, even to the inconvenience of the public. Hundreds INDIANA'S OLD DISTRICTS STAND

He was defeated in his previous race by Pactoius and Fidelio Then the blame was laid on Jockey Hamil-Then the blame was laid on Jockey Hamilton, and he was given a vacation by his employer. The jockey rode to orders, but it was not his fault that Lamplighter did not win. Lamplighter, ridden by the great Sims, won easily, beating some of the best horses in training. The reversal in form, however, set many people thinking.

It is reported that for political reasons Gut-tenburg will not open until after the Guter-natorial election has takeh place in New Jer-sey. There is no reason in this report. The hilltop track will reopen on Oct. 17 and con-tinue through until May 14. This is asserted on the authority of the management, who are making active preparations for their opening day.
